Keynote Speaker

How Racism Functions Today and Ways to Deal With It to Get to Success

Touré, a correspondent for NBC, is among the most important writers on culture working today. He is the author of Who's Afraid of Post-Blackness, a provocative and bold look at what it means to be black today and how blackness has changed over the decades. Touré has been a contributing editor at Rolling Stone for over 15 years and has interviewed nearly every major hip-hop figure.
