Do you want a vibrant, positive career? A doctoral degree from the University of Northern Colorado’s Counselor Education and Supervision program qualifies you to make a difference in your community, the counseling profession and the global community.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, careers in the counseling profession are expected to grow at above average rates over the next 10 years, with job openings predicted to outnumber qualified candidates. UNC’s doctoral program is nationally accredited by the Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs and equips graduates with the skills needed for a successful and fulfilling career.

You will learn how to:

- Apply the theory and skills of supervision, as well as develop your own personal style of supervision
- Design, deliver and evaluate course curriculum for counselor training programs at the graduate level
- Conduct and analyze qualitative and quantitative research to advance the field of counseling and counselor education
- Apply counseling theories and empirically supported practices to a diverse range of individuals, populations and settings
- Provide leadership for professional organizations and counseling programs

This degree has an 89- to 101-credit requirement including a dissertation. Students typically complete the program in three to five years. In addition to teaching counseling at universities, graduates of the program are employed in community agencies, schools, counseling centers, hospitals, employee assistance programs and private practice.

“I enjoyed witnessing a dynamic growth of my professional and personal development when I was in the doctoral program. Faculty in the UNC’s Counselor Education and Supervision Program inspired me to exceed beyond the standards of the profession and to produce quality work as a counselor educator. Toward the end of my training experience at UNC, I felt I was well prepared to serve the client and student populations. I am proud to be a part of the UNC community.”

—Varunee Faii Sangganjanavanich, Assistant professor and coordinator, Counselor Education and Supervision Doctoral Program, Department of Counseling, The University of Akron
The Graduate School

The Graduate School at the University of Northern Colorado helps you further your academic or professional career with small class sizes, top-notch faculty, sophisticated facilities and affordable tuition in 100-plus programs of study.

We offer master’s, doctoral and educational specialist programs in addition to many certificate programs available through on-campus, off-campus and online delivery.

How to Get Started

More information online
www.unco.edu/grad/inquire

Contact the Counselor Education Program
Department Chair
Heather Helm
heather.helm@unco.edu
970-351-1630

Graduate School Admissions
www.unco.edu/grad
970-351-2831
grad.school@unco.edu

Unique facts

- Faculty members’ scholarship and service include positions as editorial board members for professional journals, leadership positions in counseling organizations and presenters for groups including the Association of Counselor Education and Supervision, the American Counseling Association and the Association for Play Therapy
- The doctoral program in Counselor Education and Supervision is approved by the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education, which means that students from 14 other states can attend UNC at the resident tuition rate rather than the non-resident rate.