On October 11, 2006, Dr. Reid Hayward was an invited speaker at the Northern Colorado American Cancer Society's research reception held in Greeley, Colorado. This reception was designed to connect researchers currently funded by the American Cancer Society with donors supporting, or who may potentially support, research sponsored by the Society.

Dr. Hayward presented findings from his studies regarding the effects of physical activity on cardiac toxicities associated with chemotherapy to over 100 guests and friends of the ACS.
