

American Chemical Society Recognizes Faculty Advisor

The American Chemical Society (ACS) recently recognized Kimberly Pacheco, Assistant Professor of Chemistry, with a special commendation for her role as faculty advisor of the society's UNC student affiliate chapter. In making the commendation, the ACS cited Dr. Pacheco's outstanding commitment of time and energy in the award-winning chapter's development as an example for other student affiliate chapters' advisors to follow. UNC's chapter received an Outstanding Chapter Award for its 2007-2008 activities and the Green Chemistry Award for focusing on environmentally friendly chemistry.

December 2008