7:46	Secretary Updates	L. Kowalski
7:46	Public Comment A. Ian Michells- Has potential proposal for a cooking club. He and some friends had previously put together a cooking club to help people learn to cook. The club (Cultural Culinary Creations) was fairly successful. Basically, he would like to resurrect the club in relation to environmental issues and the student body. He would like to have an emphasis on "slow food" (canning, basic preservation, education about conscientious food decisions, in some way going back to our food roots). Some other Universities in Colorado have clubs or organizations similarly structured- so we can study what they do in our research. Stanford University has a community kitchen recently implemented to allow students to get hands on experience. We are figuring out if we'd rather structure this as a class, a community kitchen, or a club. Could potentially start as a club and eventually become a class. Coincidentally, this could be a way to make the Tower Garden Project happen, which dining previously turned down, and have students maintain them and be a source of the produce. Possibly, we could get a kitchen put into the future Campus Commons for this. B. YES wanted let us know they are having an event at Roma's next Thursday.
8:16	Adjournment	L. Kowalski
