An Examination of a Posthumously Published Collection of Charles Dickens's Writings

LUCY HARRIS

ID:892

Origin Hurd and Houghton Publishing

The publishing firm was founded on March 1,1864, by Henry Houghton and Melancthon Hurd.

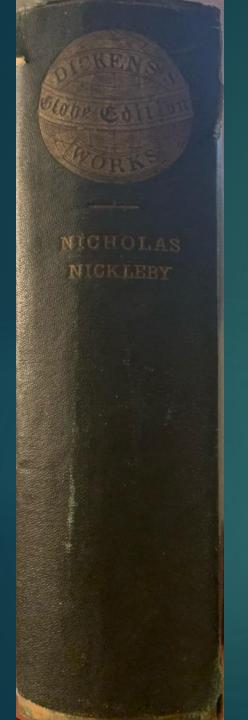

'Houghton began an apprenticeship with the owner of the Free Press at Burlington, H. Stacy, at the age of thirteen. Houghton worked under Stacy as a compositor until he was nineteen. Once he had graduated from the University of Vermont, Houghton returned to the printing trade.

Setting a Higher Standard

Houghton poured over types of font, ink, paper, and formatting. Very early on in his career, he decided that he would not stand for lackluster materials and cheaply made final products.

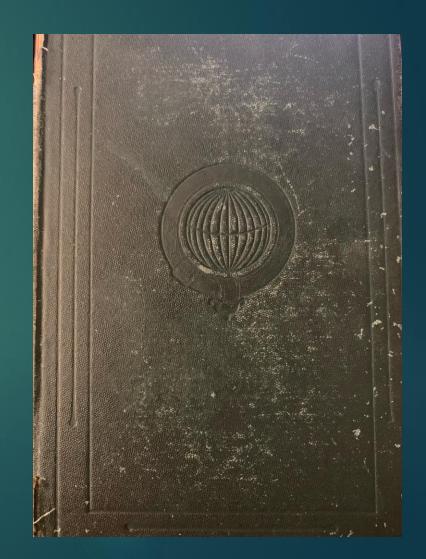

Houghton had a saying that in 1880 became the motto of Cambridge: Riverside Press.

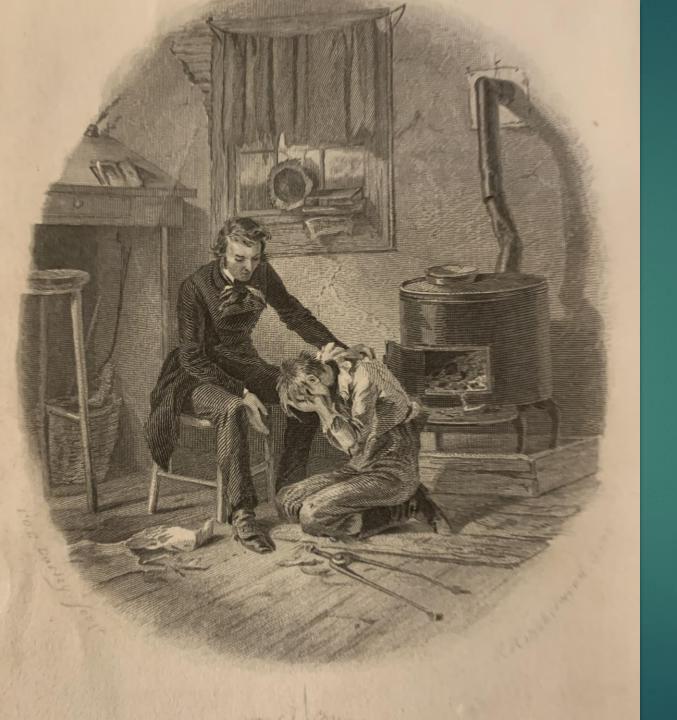

"Do it well or not at all."

The Collection Nicholas Nickleby

The Globe series consisted contained all of Charles Dickens' novels. They were printed by Hurd and Houghton in 1872. This presentation will examine one of the books from that collection. The green cover of this book is in moderate condition. Throughout the book, the main problems appear to be water damage and spinal integrity. The high standards set by Houghton are evident in the sharp text and clean formatting.

Illustrations

THE COLLECTION CONTAINS ILLUSTRATIONS FROM THE DESIGNS OF
DARLEY AND GILBERT. THE SHARPNESS
OF THE IMAGES SUGGESTS THAT THE
WOODCUT USED WAS LIKELY EITHER
NEW OR EXTREMELY WELL MAINTAINED. THE QUALITY OF THE
IMAGES IS MARRED ONLY BY THE
YELLOWING OF THE PAGES AND THE OCCASIONAL SPOT OF WATER DAMAGE.

CHARLES DICKENS.

Blobe Edition.

Illustrated from Designs by Darley and Gilbert.

NICHOLAS NICKLEBY.

FOUR VOLUMES IN ONE

NEW YORK: PUBLISHED BY HURD AND HOUGHTON.

Cambridge: Riberside Press.

1872.

Formatting

The images are crooked slightly only due to photographer error. The order and balance of the page reflect the standards of artistry set by Houghton.

	Mrs. and Alles Nutific
	CHAPTER NIC
CONT	TENTS OF VOL	UME I.
	CHAPTER I.		PA
Introduces all the rest		and a water account to the sail
and an organization of a	CHAPTER II.	nt and his Under	tak-
Of Mr. Ralph Nickleb ings. And of a g importance	rreat Joint-Stock Com	pany of vast hau	Ullat
and and and a record	CHAPTER III.
ar D L L Mi-l-labor me	pasiron Sad Tidings of	his Brother, but !	bears up nobly against t	the Intelligence commend how he liked Nicho	unicated to nim.	n in-
	CHAPTER IV.
Nicholas and his Un time) wait upon h master	Ir. Wackford Squeers,	the Torksmie D	chool
	CHAPTER V.
Nicholas starts for Yo low-Travellers, an	rkshire. Of his Lead what befell them or	re-taking and hi	s Fe
In which the Occurre	CHAPTER VI.	mentioned in the	ne la
	CHAPTER VII	THE TO ROBBITION
Mr. and Mrs. Squeers	at Home	10	•-
AVAIL oforthy boast
Of the Internal Econo	of Dotheboys He	II	1 -1751

been taken for the uneasy efforts of pain to gain some temporary relief, rather than the freaks of slumber. A few—and these were among the youngest of the children—slept peacefully on, with smiles upon their faces, dreaming perhaps of home; but ever and again a deep dreaming perhaps of home; but ever and again a deep dreaming perhaps of home; but ever and again a deep dreaming perhaps of home; but ever and again a deep dreaming perhaps of home; but ever and again a deep and heavy sigh, breaking the stillness of the room, and and heavy sigh, breaking the stillness of the room, and and heavy sigh, breaking the stillness of the room, and and heavy sigh, breaking the stillness of the room, and heavy sigh, the smiles gradually faded away, with the friendly darkness which had given them birth.

Dreams are the bright creatures of poem and legend, who sport on earth in the night season, and melt away in the first beam of the sun, which lights grim care and stern reality on their daily pilgrimage through

Nicholas looked upon the sleepers; at first, with the air of one who gazes upon a scene which, though familiar to him, has lost none of its sorrowful effect in consequence; and, afterwards, with a more intense and searching scrutiny, as a man would, who missed something his eye was accustomed to meet, and had expected to rest upon. He was still occupied in this search, and had half risen from his bed in the eagerness of his quest, when the voice of Squeers was heard, calling from the bottom of the stairs.

"Now then," cried that gentleman, "are you going to sleep all day, up there"—

"You lazy hounds?" added Mrs. Squeers, finishing the sentence, and producing, at the same time, a sharp sound, like that which is occasioned by the lacing of stays.

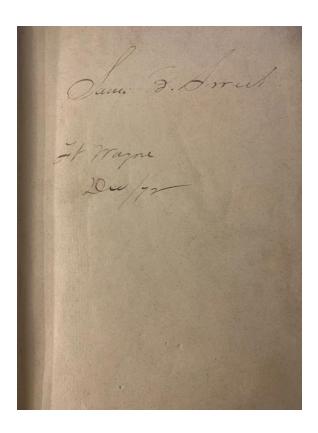

"We shall be down directly, sir," replied Nicholas.
"Down directly!" said Squeers. "Ah! you had

Janu 9. An 41 Magne 20w/72

MARGINALIA LEFT BY THE ORIGINAL OWNER

MARGINALIA LEFT BY THE ORIGINAL OWNER

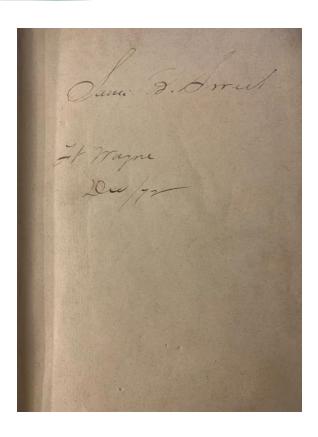

The entirety of this collection has the original owner's name written in ink inside the cover. The photos to the right are from Nicholas Nickleby. The original owner's name is Lannes Mcphetridge. In this book, he appears to have used his wife's maiden name, Sweet. The Sweet's family had a higher social standing than the Mcphetridge's. Below that, he's written an abbreviated form of "Fort Wayne", where Lannes is known to have lived.

NICHOLAS NICKLERY. been taken for the uneasy efforts of pain to gain some emporary relief, rather than the freaks of slumber. A few - and these were among the youngest of the children - slept peacefully on, with smiles upon their faces, dreaming perhaps of home; but ever and again a deep and heavy sigh, breaking the stillness of the room, announced that some new sleeper had awakened to the misery of another day; and, as morning took the place of night, the smiles gradually faded away, with the friendly darkness which had given them birth. Dreams are the bright creatures of poem and legend, who sport on earth in the night season, and melt away in the first beam of the sun, which lights grim care and stern reality on their daily pilgrimage through Nicholas looked upon the sleepers; at first, with the air of one who gazes upon a scene which, though familiar to him, has lost none of its sorrowful effect in consequence; and, afterwards, with a more intense and searching scrutiny, as a man would, who missed something his eye was accustomed to meet, and had expected to rest upon. He was still occupied in this search, and had half risen from his bed in the eagerness of his quest, when the voice of Squeers was heard, calling from the bottom of the stairs. "Now then," cried that gentleman, "are you going to "You lazy hounds?" added Mrs. Squeers, finishing the sentence, and producing, at the same time, a sharp sound, like that which is occasioned by the lacing of "We shall be down directly, sir," replied Nicholas. "Down directly!" said Squeers. "Ah! you had

MARGINALIA LEFT BY THE ORIGINAL OWNER

- On oage 223 of first volume of Nicholas Nickleeby, A paragraph was singled out, this time in pencil, not ink. The passage reads,
 - "Dreams are the bright creatures of poem and legend, who sport on earth in the night season, and melt away in the first beam of the sun, which lights grim care and stern reality on their daily pilgrimage through the world.

NICHOLAS NICKLERY. been taken for the uneasy efforts of pain to gain some emporary relief, rather than the freaks of slumber. A few -- and these were among the youngest of the children - slept peacefully on, with smiles upon their faces, dreaming perhaps of home; but ever and again a deep and heavy sigh, breaking the stillness of the room, announced that some new sleeper had awakened to the misery of another day; and, as morning took the place of night, the smiles gradually faded away, with the friendly darkness which had given them birth. Dreams are the bright creatures of poem and legend, who sport on earth in the night season, and melt away in the first beam of the sun, which lights grim care and stern reality on their daily pilgrimage through Nicholas looked upon the sleepers; at first, with the air of one who gazes upon a scene which, though familiar to him, has lost none of its sorrowful effect in consequence; and, afterwards, with a more intense and searching scrutiny, as a man would, who missed something his eye was accustomed to meet, and had expected to rest upon. He was still occupied in this search, and had half risen from his bed in the eagerness of his quest, when the voice of Squeers was heard, calling from the bottom of the stairs. "Now then," cried that gentleman, "are you going to sleep all day, up there"-"You lazy hounds?" added Mrs. Squeers, finishing the sentence, and producing, at the same time, a sharp sound, like that which is occasioned by the lacing of "We shall be down directly, sir," replied Nicholas. "Down directly!" said Squeers. "Ah! you had

Work Cited

- ▶ Dickens, Charles. Nicholas Nickleby. Globe Edition ed., Hurd and Houghton Cambridge: Riverside Press, 1872.
- ▶ DORNBUSCH, ERIN. "Riverside Press." Industry in Cambridge, cambridgehistory.org/industry/riversidepress.html.
- "Every Family Has a Story." Ancestry® | Genealogy, Family Trees & Family History Records, www.ancestry.com/?ancid=ln5msiafxu&s kwcid=ancestry&gclid=C N2FsdHP7e8CFRCzxQldlB4HOQ&gclsrc=ds&o xid=68273&o lid=68273&o sch=Paid%2BSearch%2BNon%2BBrand.
- "The Riverside Press by James Duncan Phillips." Cambridge Historical Society, cambridgehistory.org/research/the-riverside-press/.