CRIMINOLOGY & CRIMINAL JUSTICE INTERNSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

An internship for Criminology & Criminal Justice majors is strongly suggested but not required. In recent years, we have placed our student interns with police departments, sheriff departments, county jails, state prisons, district courts, public defender's offices, district attorney offices, federal investigation agencies, probation and parole departments, and a variety of other places.

The internship program requires an application to the Criminal Justice Department with the following attachments:

1. A completed Internship Confirmation form from internship agency.
2. A signed agreement included in the application that you understand and accept the terms of the internship.

The department will obtain a contract between the University of Northern Colorado and the Agency. You must notify the Internship Coordinator as early as possible when you decide to seek an internship placement.

To be eligible for the internship, you must be a Criminology/Criminal Justice Major or Minor and have completed at least 60 hours of course work. Additionally, you must have completed the 100 and 200 level core class requirements.

You will not be permitted to register for the class until your application, with all of the attached documents, is submitted to and approved by the internship coordinator.

Once your application is approved, you will be notified concerning the registration process.

Why Intern?

The internship provides an opportunity to gain knowledge of and experience in the criminal justice system. The internship will familiarize you with one or several aspects (depending on your internship) of the criminal justice system. In fact, while doing your internship you may become aware of a career area you did not even know existed.

Getting a Job

A student often undertakes the internship, hoping they will be employed by the agency. This does happen occasionally but more importantly; the experience will open doors for you with other agencies. ALWAYS remember to list your internship as work experience on your resume when applying for jobs. Some agencies even give credit for volunteer (internship) work. Also, keep in mind that your internship field supervisor may serve as a reference when you apply for jobs as well.

While Interning

Remember while you are interning that the agency personnel are expending time, energy, and money to train and share their job activities with you. Some of you will have internships which almost immediately involve you in "hands-on" work. Others will spend most of the time observing a variety of people involved in many activities but not have the opportunity to do much on your own. Both types of experiences are important! You may be asked to do what appears to be "go-fer" work, but the expectation is that you will do whatever a person in the position you are learning about may have to do. Contact your UNC internship coordinator if you have any questions or concerns.

Intern Possibilities

The four general headings listed below are somewhat arbitrary. Regardless of your specific career goals, please read about the opportunities available under each heading. For example, you may find something that is corrections-related even though it is listed under "Courts." The agencies listed here are either places we have placed interns in recent years or are agencies that have contacted us and requested interns. The list is as current as possible, but keep in mind that personnel and address changes do occur. If a particular person is no longer at the agency you contact, simply ask to speak to the person in charge of student interns or volunteers.

Agencies not listed can also be approved by the internship coordinator if you are offered an internship with them.

1. Law Enforcement
2. Private Investigation
3. Courts

Aurora Police Department

Aurora operates an internship that works with a student's ability and interests and tries to put a schedule together that will work for him/her. Students are exposed to many different bureaus within the department and a student's schedule can be set up to rotate between these bureaus. Interns will get a very good overview of all the major areas and sections of a large city police department. Summers only allow 3 interns. Possible applicants must apply before the end of March.

Evans Police Department

This Internship program offers students an opportunity to experience first-hand a variety of activities and work assignments consistent with police departments in Northeast Colorado. Students interact with both civilian and sworn personnel as they learn how the various functions of a police agency work toward accomplishing the police mission within the community. This is an interactive program; simply showing up is not enough. Students must become a part of the department's effort. Individual talent and skills will determine overall success. The department is service oriented and embraces a community policing philosophy with an emphasis on communication and interaction with the citizens. Participation in monthly in-service training is an optional activity highly encouraged for students who want to go beyond the minimum expectations. Please call to schedule an appointment.

Courts

Seventeenth Judicial District (Brighton) Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders (FASD)

The Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders (FASD) Project in the 17th Judicial District provides interns an opportunity to learn about Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders and the effects of this disorder on the criminal justice system. Individuals affected by this condition are often involved with the law and frequently have difficulty following the basic requirements of probation. The FASD Project identifies these youths who are on probation, has them evaluated, and works to help them succeed on Probation, in school, and at home. This internship provides experience with the juvenile court, Probation, and numerous community agencies. Interns work in a team with an attorney and two social workers. The Project is housed in the District Court in Brighton. We ask for a minimum of 8 hours per week for a six-month time frame.

Child Advocacy Resource and Education (C.A.R.E.)

C.A.R.E. is a non-profit agency with a mission of preventing child abuse and neglect and the preservation of families. Services include parent education classes, support groups, respite care, supervised visitations, in home advocates, divorce workshops, community education, a school based body safety program for children, and teen parent support services. Interns with C.A.R.E. are given a wide variety of opportunities to work with the children, parents, and with other aspects of the agency. Potential interns are interviewed prior to acceptance in the agency. Those accepted as interns then complete training that is scheduled to coincide with UNC's semester schedule.

Life Stories- CASA and Child Advocacy Center

Up to one a semester depending on our availability. The requirements to be a CASA volunteer is that they be 21, complete a 35 hour training and then once they receive a case, they spend 10-15 hours a month on a case with a commitment of at least 18 months. On a case, they will be visiting with children weekly, attending court hearings, attending team meetings, talking to teachers and other professionals involved with the children, writing court reports to the judge, and reporting to their supervisor. For an internship on site, requirements and duties include filing, scanning documents, helping to prepare and set up for our CASA volunteer trainings, helping at various agency fundraisers, other office/paperwork duties, helping with other projects going on at the time, and learning and working with program staff to attend and be a part of program and community meetings. They would mostly be working with the CASA program and not the Child Advocacy Center (CAC) due to confidentiality and training that is required to work in that part of the agency. NOTE: You don't have to be a CASA Volunteer to be an intern, but some choose to do both at the same time and can use their training and CASA work on a case as part of their internship hours.
