Why UNC?

We welcome everyone

Our campus is more than a place. We have welcoming, supportive community that's home to 36% students of color and students from all 50 states and 46 countries.

#2

We keep a college education affordable and accessible

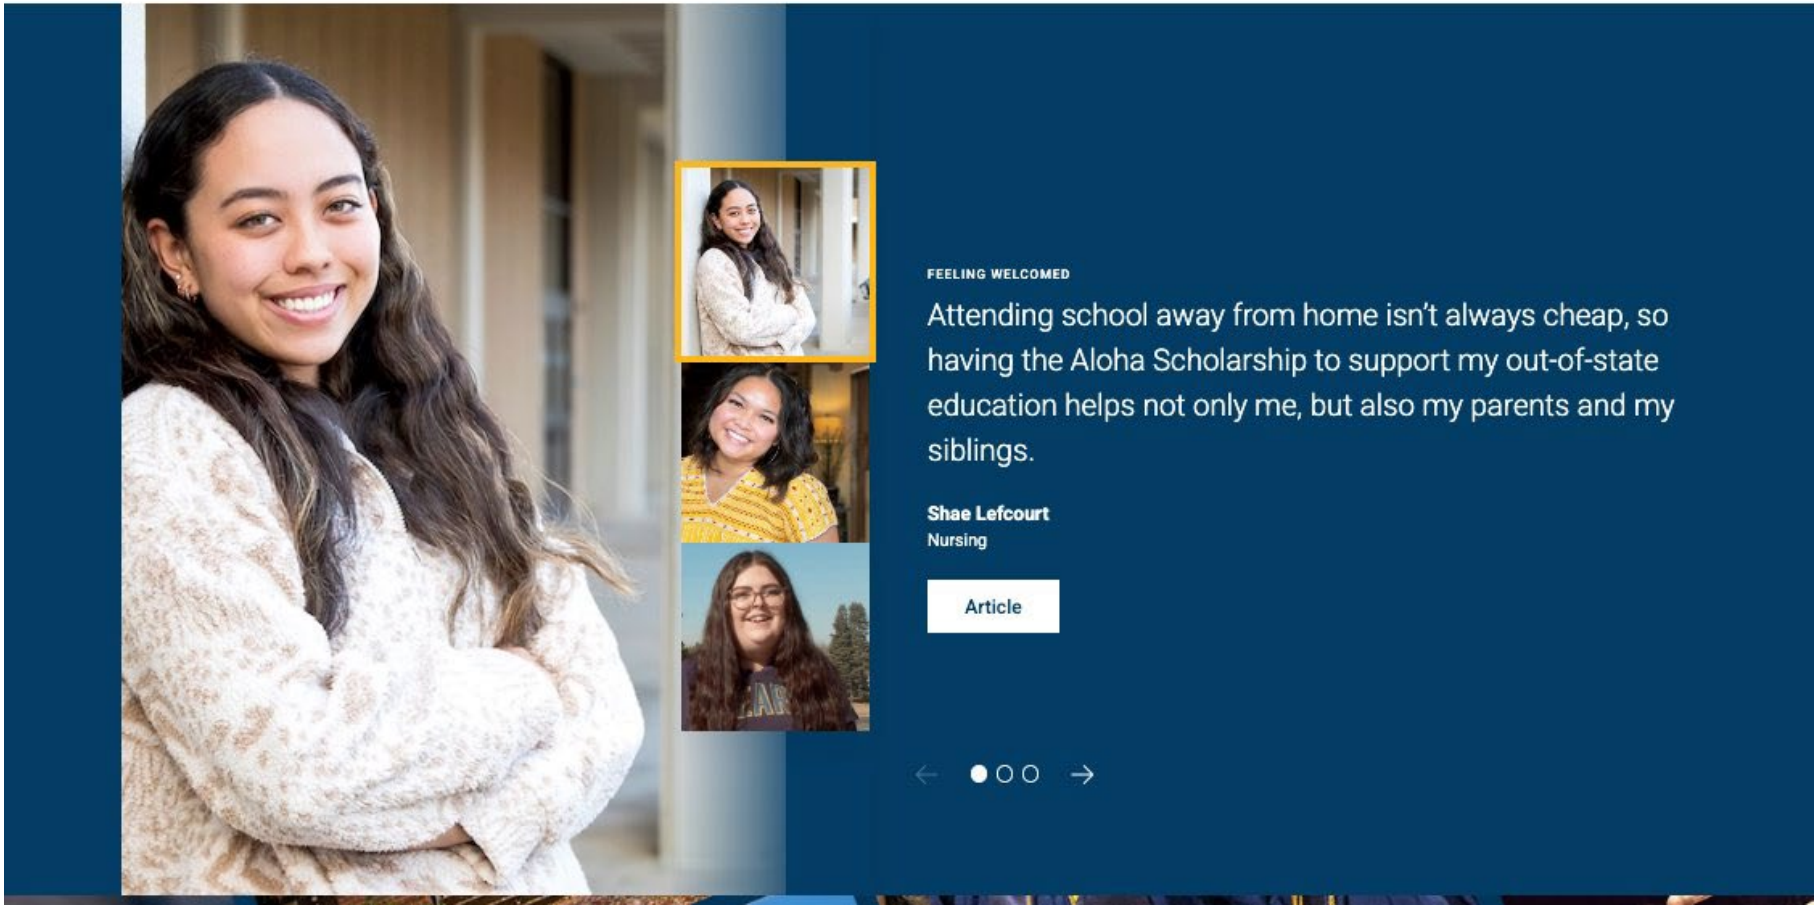

We have the second lowest average loan debt at graduation among all Colorado public research universities. So the money you start earning after graduation is yours.

44%

We help First Gen students thrive

At UNC, 44% of our students are first in their families to attend college. We know how to support First Generation students, having earned state and national recognition in 2024.

Not Your Average Bear

Research Excellence

A public research university, UNC is home to a community of scholars and researchers dedicated to enhancing education and making a significant impact on communities here in Colorado and around the world. We are improving cancer care, shaping K-12 education, influencing business practices, pushing creative boundaries in the arts and addressing critical social issues.

The Age of AI

FACULTY IMPACT

"AI is the latest disruptor. And I think it's important to explain it well to students. There's an expression in Silicon Valley – 'move fast and break things.' This refers to disruptive technologies finding success by being disruptive."

Fighting Oppression with Art

STUDENT IMPACT

"I got engaged last year. Through the process of learning about common wedding traditions, I started recognizing how the many traditions society celebrates are rooted in oppression. They are designed to control women."

Program Overview

Studying Communication Sciences and Disorders is a preprofessional program that prepares you by learning about the sciences, anatomy and physiology, psychology, development of audition, language and speech, principles of hearing science, technical instrumentation and problem solving.

You'll have the opportunity to use the latest specialized equipment and techniques for diagnosing and treating communication disorders.

UNC has an on-campus clinic where you can get hands on experience. With focuses on audiology and speech language pathology, you can choose to get certified as a speech-language pathology assistant or go on to graduate school.

— Major Requirements

- Explore the science behind how we talk, formulate language, speak, hear and listen. You will explore a variety of communication disorders, including brain injury, stroke, autism, developmental delays, hearing loss and more.
- Your required major is between 67-70 credits. Take classes on subjects that cover articulation, audiology, phonetics and more. Your final courses will align with what you plan to study at a graduate level.

College of Osteopathic Medicine

OUR COMMUNITY, FOR YOUR COMMUNITY

Born from a legacy of student-first excellence, UNC's COM prepares doctors with a commitment to community and the healing power of human connection.

Medicine is personal. At UNC, so is medical education. Our College of Osteopathic Medicine is built around people—students, patients, and the communities we serve. Rooted in a mission to deliver patient-centered care and health equity, we prepare capable and empathetic doctors who reflect their communities and connect at a human level. Our college is welcoming, supportive, and deeply attuned to the real lives of students and patients alike. We are a bold investment in the future of care—personal, purposeful, and committed to Colorado and beyond.
