Types of relationships we’ll discuss

- Healthy
- Difficult
- Toxic / Unhealthy
- Abusive

*Keep in mind: YOU are the only person that can decide what to label your relationship and how to feel about it
THE RELATIONSHIP SPECTRUM

All relationships exist on a spectrum from healthy to abusive with unhealthy somewhere in the middle.

Healthy relationships are based on equality and respect.
- Respect
- Good Communication
- Trust
- Honesty
- Equality

You make decisions together and can openly discuss whatever you’re dealing with, like relationship problems and sexual choices. You enjoy spending time together but can be happy apart.

Unhealthy relationships are based on attempts to control the other person.
- Breaks in Communication
- Pressure
- Dishonesty
- Struggles for Control
- Inconsiderate Behavior

One person tries to make most of the decisions. He or she may pressure their partner about sex or refuse to see how their actions can hurt. In an unhealthy relationship, you feel like you should only spend time with your partner.

Abusive relationships are based on an imbalance of power and control.
- Accusations
- Blame Shifting
- Isolation Pressure
- Manipulation

One person is making all of the decisions — about sexual choices, friend groups, boundaries, even what’s true and what’s not. You spend all of your time together and feel like you can’t talk to other people, especially about what’s really happening in your relationship.
Difficult Relationships

- Area between healthy and unhealthy relationships
- Just because a relationship is difficult doesn't mean it is always toxic
- Difficult relationships aren’t “doomed”
- All relationships have challenges and hurdles
  - Living in different locations
  - Cultural differences
  - One member in school
  - Single income household
  - Illness/Disability
  - Child care
  - Etc...
Toxic Relationships

- Mentally, emotionally, and/or physically damaging
- Damages or drains self-esteem or energy
- Characterized by insecurity, self-centeredness, dominance, and control
- Absence of care, respect, and compassion
- Absence of safety, trust, comfort, and security

SIGNS OF A TOXIC RELATIONSHIP

- Draining & depressing
- It’s all about them
- Not supportive
- Lack of trust & communication
- Constant negative energy
- All take & no give
- Mutual avoidance
- Excessive jealousy
- Brings the worst out of you
- Continuous disrespect
The Person I’m With (Often, Sometimes or Never)

1. Is very supportive of things that I do and encourages me to try new things.
2. Likes to listen when I have something on my mind.
3. Talks to me when they’re unhappy with something in the relationship.
4. Is willing to compromise.
5. Understands that we have separate interests and can spend time apart.
6. Is mean or rude to my friends.
7. Criticizes or distracts me when I’m doing things that don’t involve them.
8. Gets extremely jealous or possessive.
9. Accuses me of flirting or cheating when I’m not.
10. Constantly checks up on me or makes me check in.
11. Breaks or throws things when we fight.
12. Threatens to destroy my things.
13. Tries to control what I do, who I see, what I wear, how I look or who I talk to.
14. Makes me feel nervous or like I’m “walking on eggshells.”
15. Blames me for problems, puts me down, calls me names or criticizes me.
16. Makes me feel like no one else would want me.
17. Threatens to hurt themselves, me, my friends, pets or family.
18. Grabs, pushes, shoves, chokes, punches, slaps, holds me down, throws things or hurts me in some way.
19. Yells, screams or humiliates me in front of other people.
20. Pressures, guilts or forces me into having sex or going farther than I want to.
Abusive Relationships

What are the different types of abuse?

- Physical Abuse
- Emotional / Verbal Abuse
- Sexual Abuse
- Financial Abuse
- Digital Abuse
- Stalking
Cycle of Abuse

- Explains patterns of behavior in abusive relationships
- Describes set of conditions present that perpetuate abusive and dysfunctional relationships
- Contains cyclical pattern of calm, violence, and reconciliation
- Phases:
  a. Tension Building
  b. Acute Violence
  c. Reconciliation / “Honeymoon”
  d. Calm
Healthy Relationships

1. Communication
   a. Allows two or more people to have a deep understanding of one another and connect to each other
   b. Good communication entails:
      i. Respect
      ii. Openness and Honesty
      iii. Feeling heard
      iv. Listening and compromise
      v. Not using criticism or judgement
      vi. Support of things each partner enjoys
      vii. Celebration of accomplishments and successes

1. Boundaries
   a. Allows two or more people to define comfort zones such as sex, finances, family and friends, personal space and time.
   b. Good boundaries entail:
      i. Time for family and friends
      ii. Not abusing technology to “check” on each other
      iii. Trusting without “checking in”
      iv. Not pressuring the other to do things they don’t want to.
      v. Not using accusation (cheating, being unfaithful, not caring enough)
Grad School Impacts

A relationship is simultaneously a source of support and a source of demanding responsibilities

- Financial
- Time Restrictions
- Energy
- Planning
- Fears and Insecurities
- Change in identity (worker to student)
Action step: Setting boundaries

- Know your limits
- Know your values
- Listen to your emotions
- Have self-respect
- Have respect for others
- Be assertive
- Consider the long view
  - How much you’re giving vs. taking - flexibility and balance

Tips for Healthy Boundaries

Personal boundaries are the limits and rules we set for ourselves within relationships. A person with healthy boundaries can say "no" to others when they want to, but they are also comfortable opening themselves up to intimacy and close relationships.

Know your limits.
Before becoming involved in a situation, know what’s acceptable to you, and what isn’t. It’s best to be as specific as possible, or you might be pulled into the trap of giving just a little bit more, over and over, until you’ve given far too much.

Know your values.
Every person’s limits are different, and they’re often determined by their personal values. For example, if you value family above all else, this might lead to stricter limits on how late you will stay at work, away from family. Know what’s most important to you, and protect it.

Listen to your emotions.
If you notice feelings of discomfort or resentment, don’t bury them. Try to understand what your feelings are telling you. Remember, for example, can often be traced to feelings of being taken advantage of.

Have self-respect.
If you always give in to others, ask if you are showing as much respect to yourself as you show to others. Boundaries that are too open might be due to misguided attempts to be liked by elevating other people's needs above your own.

Have respect for others.
Be sure that your actions are not self-serving, at the expense of others. Interactions should not be about winning, or taking as much as possible. Instead, consider what’s fair to everyone, given the setting and relationship. You might “win”, but at the cost of a relationship’s long-term health.

Be assertive.
When you know it’s time to set a boundary, don’t be shy. Say “no” respectfully, but without ambiguity. If you can make a compromise while respecting your own boundaries, try it. This is a good way to soften the “no”, while showing respect to everyone involved.

Consider the long view.
Some days you will give more than you take, and other days you will take more than you give. Be willing to take a longer view of relationships, when appropriate. But if you’re always the one who’s giving or taking, there might be a problem.
Setting Boundaries

Personal boundaries are the limits and rules we set for ourselves within relationships. A person with healthy boundaries can say “no” to others when they want to, but they are also comfortable opening themselves up to intimacy and close relationships.

Know Your Boundaries

Boundaries should be based on your values, or the things that are important to you. For example, if you value spending time with family, set firm boundaries about working late.

Your boundaries are yours, and yours alone. Many of your boundaries might align with those who are close to you, but others will be unique.

Know your boundaries before entering a situation. This will make it less likely you’ll do something you’re not comfortable with.

What to Say

You always have the right to say “no”. When doing so, express yourself clearly and without ambiguity so there is no doubt about what you want.

- “I’m not comfortable with this”
- “I can’t do that for you”
- “This is not acceptable”
- “Please don’t do that”
- “This doesn’t work for me”
- “I’m drawing the line at ___”
- “Not at this time”
- “I’ve decided not to”
- “I don’t want to do that”

What to Do

Use Confident Body Language

Face the other person, make eye contact, and use a steady tone of voice at an appropriate volume (not too quiet, and not too loud).

Be Respectful

Avoid yelling, using put-downs, or giving the silent treatment. It’s okay to be firm, but your message will be better received if you are respectful.

Plan Ahead

Think about what you want to say, and how you will say it, before entering a difficult discussion. This can help you feel more confident about your position.

Compromise

When appropriate, listen and consider the needs of the other person. You never have to compromise, but give-and-take is part of any healthy relationship.
Action step: Assertive communication

Assertive Communication

Assertive Communication: A communication style in which a person stands up for their own needs and wants, while also taking into consideration the needs and wants of others, without behaving passively or aggressively.

Traits of Assertive Communicators

- Clearly state needs and wants
- Eye contact
- Listens to others without interruption
- Appropriate speaking volume
- Steady tone of voice
- Confident body language

Assertiveness Tips

Respect yourself. Your needs, wants, and rights are as important as anyone else’s. It’s fine to express what you want, so long as you are respectful toward the rights of others.

Express your thoughts and feelings calmly. Giving the silent treatment, yelling, threatening, and shaming are all great examples of what not to do. Take responsibility for your emotions, and express them in a calm and factual manner. Try starting sentences with “I feel…”.

Plan what you’re going to say. Know your wants and needs, and how you can express them, before entering a conversation. Come up with specific sentences and words you can use.

Say “no” when you need to. You can’t make everyone happy all the time. When you need to say “no”, do so clearly, without lying about the reasons. Offer to help find another solution.
Action step: Self-care

Self-care is not selfish. You must fill your own cup before you pour into others

- “Self-care is important to maintaining a healthy relationship with yourself. It means doing things to take care of our minds, bodies, and souls by engaging in activities that promote well-being and reduce stress. Doing so enhances our ability to live fully, vibrantly, and effectively. The practice of self-care also reminds both you and others that your needs are valid and a priority.” Active Minds, 2020
