Research in Progress

"Bavarian German Liquid Vocalizations and the Features of Glides" (On-Going).

This article examines a particular variety of Bavarian German and how vocalizations of 'r' and 'l' lend insight into features for glides.

"Bavarian German Umlaut as Unrounding" (On-Going).

This article examines a particular variety of Bavarian German and how the process of Umlaut functions in this dialect. The analysis lends insight into the place features in this dialect.

"On the Sonority of Rhotics: Bavarian German Flapping" (On-Going).

This article examines a particular variety of Bavarian German and how in the sequence of 'rl', [r] is realized as a flap. This research lends insight into the cross-linguistic sonority of Rhotics.

"Vowel Unpacking of French Loanwords: Evidence for Dorsal Unmarkedness" (On-Going).

This article examines French words with nasalized vowels, which are borrowed into German and Norwegian. The analysis gives evidence that Dorsal is unmarked in these Germanic languages.
