Information Services Department Receives National Recognition for Exemplary Teaching

The Information Services Department of University Libraries received the ACRL Exemplary University Libraries Teaching Program Award in 2014 for its Core Library Instruction Program (CLIP). CLIP is a comprehensive, integrated library instruction program designed to support the achievement of student learning goals. The program includes classroom instruction, research guides, and other resources to assist students in their research and learning.

To greet distance and online students, the CLIP program offers a variety of online learning resources, including video tutorials, interactive activities, and online reference materials. Distance students report that these resources help them feel more connected to the campus community and supported in their academic endeavors.

The recognition is part of ACRL's Information Literacy Program Excellence. The Instructional Services Department of University Libraries is committed to providing outstanding instruction and support to all students. Visit our website to learn more about our services and resources.
