University Libraries Add Over 50,000 Items to Decker Hall, where the pantry is located, is a site for food donations for Bear Pantry, a University Libraries service.

For the University Libraries' winter reading challenge, they recommended the novel "Anatomy Figure Added: A Student's Introduction to the Human Body" by Debra Delong. It provides a comprehensive look at the human body, with content in more varied formats.

The Libraries have purchased Elsevier's "Clinical Key" database, which contains more than 500 expert-authored interactive ebooks in health sciences, and promises to be one of many more to come. The library also has a Summon search, which allows students to search and discover a diverse range of content, and how best to utilize it for teaching and learning.

The Anthropology Department plans to exhibit "Dearfield: The Pioneer Community of the Eastern Plains," a history of the community that flourished in the 19th and early 20th centuries. The Dearfield iBook is intended to provide insight into the development of literacy, and the youth collection at the Libraries' primary source collections.

The Libraries have acquired a mix of items: puppets, oral recordings, and other materials, including early textbooks, faculty papers, and student voices in the Libraries' archival collections. The libraries have a program in place for digitizing archival and other primary source materials and making them readily integrated into the classroom for teaching.

The National History Day activities in Greeley include the northeast Colorado regional competition held in Ross Hall on the first Saturday in March under the direction of the University Libraries and the Greeley/Weld County community. Participating students conduct original research and activities in Greeley. NHD is a competition for middle and high school history students that has been described as "like a science fair, but for history." Participating students conduct original research and activities in Greeley. NHD is a competition for middle and high school history students that has been described as "like a science fair, but for history."

The "Museum of the Rockies" program began in September 2015 and concluded in April 2016. The series of programs ended with a presentation about the "Trumbo Project," a collaboration between the Rocky Mountain PBS series "Falcón" and Denver Art Museum. The "Trumbo Project" includes a presentation about the "Trumbo Project," a collaboration between the Rocky Mountain PBS series "Falcón" and Denver Art Museum. The "Trumbo Project" includes a presentation about the "Trumbo Project," a collaboration between the Rocky Mountain PBS series "Falcón" and Denver Art Museum.