

It takes A Village...

Slide 1: Title: It takes a village... taking a closer look at interpreter education and community capacity.

Slide 2: Welcome: Introduction and webinar process.

Slide 3: Topic overview: Paula Gajewski Mickelson, St. Catherine University – Photo.

Slide 4: Linda Stauffer, University of Arkansas, Little Rock – Photo.

Slide 5: Laurence Hayes, Eastern Kentucky University – Photo.

Slide6: Stacey Storme, Johnson County Community College – Photo.

Slide 7: Lauri Metcalf, San Antonio College – Photo.

Slide 8: Panel discussion: Generally speaking, how is your community involved in your program? What changes have you noticed in this involvement over the years? Have you noticed signs of “reaching capacity” in your community in term of their involvement in your program?

1. Laurence
2. Lauri
3. Linda
4. Stacey

Slide 9: Questions and comments

Slide 10: Panel discussion: How are members of the Deaf Community involved in your program? Do you see their involvement as an easy task to incorporate or difficult? Why are why not?

- 1.Stacey
- 2.Lauri
- 3.Laurence
- 4.Linda

Slide 11: Questions and comments.

Slide 12: Panel discussion: How do you approach internship placements with your students? Have you experienced any challenges in terms of placements? How have you addressed them?

1. Lauri
2. Linda
3. Laurence
4. Stacey

Slide 13: Questions and comments

Slide 14: Panel discussion: How do you approach internship placements with your students?
Have you experienced any challenges in terms of placements? How have you addressed them?

1. Linda
2. Laurence
3. Stacey
4. Lauri

Slide 15: Questions and comments

Slide 16: Panel discussion: What strategies have you used to address challenges already faced?
Have they worked? Why or why not?

1. Laurence
2. Lauri
3. Linda
4. Stacey

Slide 17: Question and Comments

Slide 18: Panel discussion: Closing thoughts, comments and/or questions you believe our field needs to consider when thinking about capacity.

1. Stacey
2. Lauri
3. Laurence
4. Linda

Slide 19: Closing Remarks. Photo of Paula Gajewski Mickelson

Slide 20: Wrap Up. Thank You.