

Nominations Sought for the 2017 Award for Excellence in Social Science Engaged Research

What is the award? The Award for Excellence in Social Science Engaged Research, launched in 2012, is the result of a generous endowment from Robert Brunswig, Rebecca Brunswig, and Ken Coleman. A new award of $1,000 is offered each year to a faculty member who has demonstrated exemplary scholarship in engaged research and civic engagement.

Who is eligible? Individuals who are eligible for the award are social science and social science associated discipline faculty members who are contract-renewable or tenure track lecturers, instructors or assistant professors, with M.A. or Ph.D. degrees (or both) who are working in one of the following departments, schools, or academic programs: Anthropology; Africana Studies; Economics; Environmental Studies; Gender Studies; Geography & GIS; Human Services (programs in Community Health; Gerontology; Rehabilitative Services; and Recreation, Tourism and Hospitality); Hispanic Studies; Modern Languages; Nursing; Political Science; Social Science; and Sociology.

How is civic engagement defined? For the purpose of the award, civic engagement is defined a research and scholarly activity projects and programs involving mutually beneficial, reciprocity-based collaborations of University of Northern Colorado faculty, students or staff from within or across disciplines in departments or colleges with external groups, organizations, governmental agencies, or individuals in applied or fundamental research programs. Civic engagement activities may involve local community (a town, community inters, service or non-profit organizations, or local government and schools) or wider, more inclusive civic entities such as regional coalitions; federal, state or regional organizations; or private or federal and state agencies and organizations.
